

COLLABORATING WITH MHRN

Where to begin

NIMH funded the establishment of MHRN with a goal of creating the infrastructure for population-based research in mental health. We have valuable expertise and resources in our network available for conducting research in mental health. Please don't hesitate to reach out to us and inquire about potential collaborations.

There are several ways we'd suggest for getting engaged with MHRN below.

- Take a look at some of the resources posted on our website to get an idea of the scientific expertise within the network, the health system populations and health system characteristics of participating organizations, and the data resources available.
- Contact one of the MHRN researchers with similar interests listed in our directory.
- Reach out to the MHRN PI Greg Simon @ simon.g@ghc.org
- Learn more about a Scientific Interest Group in an area of interest to you; contact one of the SIG lead investigators to join the group.
- Send an inquiry via this website form at Contact Us or Collaborative Inquiries.
